

WOMAN'S STORY OF
10,000-MILE TRIP.Maria Sany de Diego Tells of Long Journey to Avoid Climbing Andes Mountains.

To save herself a perilous climb over the towering Andes in Peru, Mrs. Maria Sany de Diego, a Spanish woman, is travelling over 10,000 miles by land and sea to be united with her husband.

She has accomplished about half the journey when she arrived at this port today on the steamship Albano, from South American ports. The Albano got in this morning, landing her passengers at Naughton's stores, pier 6, East River.

BY MARIA SANY DE DIEGO.

My husband and I left Spain two years ago to try our fortunes in South America. The Caribbees were troubling at home and my husband was a soldier, though brave and strong. We left our two children in Spain.

We went to Buenos Aires, high up on the eastern slope of the Andes. There in the mixed population of Italians, Peruvians, Chiles, Indians, Jews, Spaniards, Chinese and others from all over the world, we tried to earn a living by making feedstuffs.

We could earn but about thirty silver dollars (Mexican), each month and live was high. The boys earn only two or three cents a day. No one had money there but the contractors in the rubber trade. They grew rich quickly while the others die.

Husband goes to Lima.

My husband and I decided to go to Lima on the west side of the Andes. It was barely 500 miles away, but over a terrible trail.

I took forty days to make the trip and my woman has not done it and died. We had about 250. My husband gave me this and I started away by myself over the mountain. Where he is now, I don't know if he lives or not.

I took a river boat and sailed 250 miles down the terrible Amazon to Paris in Brazil. From there I went to Rio de Janeiro, Lima and at last to the Andes. Then I came here.

Now I start tomorrow for Colon. I will cross the isthmus and sail down the west coast to Calcutta and then to Lima. I left Lima on March 3, three months journeying. And I do pray so hard to find my husband. I have barely money enough to get to Colon. Perhaps the Spanish Consul will help me and love for my husband sustain me.

SENATOR MONEY IN FIGHT
STABS A CAR CONDUCTOR.

(Special to The Evening World.)
WASHINGTON, April 24.—Senator H. D. Money, of Mississippi, an defending himself to-day against an attack by a street-car conductor, cut the man in the hand with a pocket knife.

Senator Money was struck in the face by the conductor, but not severely hurt. The conductor struck with his wounded hand, and the Senator's face was smeared with blood. This gave rise to a report that he had been badly injured.

The trouble occurred on a Fourteenth street car, at the Peace Monument. The Senator had transferred from another car which he had boarded by mistake.

He says he asked for a transfer check, but it was not given promptly, and as he was hurrying to catch a train, he jumped to the other car, whose conductor saw the transfer.

When this conductor demanded a fare the Senator refused to pay, and a struggle ensued. In this the conductor was assisted by a passenger.

The Senator says that when they first undertook to get him the car was in full motion, and he feels that if they had succeeded at that time he would inevitably have been badly hurt.

The conductor and his assistant did not, however, succeed in their attack until the car stopped at the next crossing to let off other passengers.

He says that both the conductor and

CLARK ARRESTED FOR FAST DRIVING.

(Special to The Evening World.)
WASHINGTON, April 24.—W. A. Clark, Senator from Montana, the richest man in the United States Senate, was arrested for driving his automobile, the "Black Dragon," too fast in the Capitol grounds today.

The "Black Dragon" is modelled after the famous machine used by King Edward. The Senator drives his fine machine at a tremendous speed through the streets of the city and over the roads around Washington. He has frequently been warned by the police that he must not go so recklessly. A few days ago the Senator was arrested for driving too fast in the Capitol grounds, and he was released only after he had promised to drive more slowly.

Clark and his friends were so good this morning he forgot and was arrested. He was released only after he had promised to drive more slowly.

O. H. P. Belmont, another millionaire legislator, was arrested a few days ago for driving too fast. He was released only after he had promised to drive more slowly.

The police station released him and he was released only after he had promised to drive more slowly.

WIDOW OF ARTIST MORAN
SUES FOR HIS PAINTINGS.

Mrs. Annette Moran, widow of Edward Moran, the famous marine painter, was the plaintiff today in a suit before Justice Clarke, of the Supreme Court, against J. Lee Moran, executor of her husband's estate.

She alleges that he is withholding from her twenty-four paintings from her husband's brush when he gave to her prior to his death.

The paintings are now alleged to be in the vaults of the Lincoln Safe Deposit Company with a series of thirteen historical pictures, representing epochs in the marine history of the United States. These paintings the dead painter instructed by his will should be given to the New York Library, provided they could not be sold within two years of his death for $5000.

Mrs. Moran alleges that she has demanded the twenty-four paintings from the executor, but that he has refused to give them up. She was represented in court by Theodore Sutro, who was accompanied by Mrs. Sutro, herself a graduate of the New York University Law School.

Mrs. Moran is herself an artist of note. She was not so famous as her husband, but her landscapes are considered very good indeed. She is now past seventy years of age and lives at No. 384 Fifth avenue.

Her husband died in June, 1901, leaving her an estate valued at $200,000, largely in his own pictures. At her death the estate was divided among her son, Percy Moran, and her daughter, Mrs. J. Lee Moran.

Painted them for her.

Thomas Moran, a son of the late John Moran and nephew of Edward Moran, testified that all the pictures were painted by his father. He was the greatest of them all. He said he had often heard his uncle Edward say while at work on one of his famous series of thirteen pictures of American history.

"I am painting this one for Annette," or "I am making this series for my son." They may keep her after I am gone.

The series begins with "The Landing of Laif Ericson" and concludes with "The Battle of Gettysburg." Mrs. Moran will testify to-morrow.

She says she is now without means, and that Mrs. Theodore Sutro has been her hand and studio. She still lives in her husband's studio, at No. 384 Fifth avenue. She says that the thirteen historical pictures and nine others belonging to her were taken from her rooms in spite of her protest that they were hers, and that she told the law would settle that. Percy and Leon Moran are sons of the famous artist by a former wife.

BRIDGE CRUSH TO
SUBWAY BOARD.Mayor Takes Problem
Out of Lindenthal's Hands.

HIS PLANS LIKE OTHERS.

They Will All Be Considered
by the Rapid Transit Commission.

Mayor Low asked the Rapid Transit Commissioners this afternoon to act as a Board of Inquiry and investigate the bridge crash, recommending a remedy. This is understood to mean that Gustav Lindenthal as Bridge Commissioner is now an impossibility.

Mr. Lindenthal's numerous plans, along with the plans of Commissioner Shea's expert and all other plans are to be submitted to this Board of Inquiry. This puts Mr. Lindenthal on a level with his predecessors in the estimation of the Mayor.

The Rapid Transit Commissioners acceded to the Mayor's request. This action of the Mayor greatly strengthens the rumor that Commissioner Lindenthal has been given one month in which to justify his fitness or resign.

A reporter for The Evening World went to Mr. Lindenthal this afternoon to ask if this rumor had any basis in truth.

The Commissioner declined to be seen, but sent out word that he had nothing to say.

One of Mr. Lindenthal's plans involved the tearing down of the old Hall of Records to make room for a tall switch for Brooklyn Bridge.

At the meeting Engineer Parsons asked Mayor Low if the building was to be torn down.

"No," said the Mayor. "I am not aware that I have any more right to tear down public than private buildings."

This is another blow at a Lindenthal idea.

Aaron Galef, who says he is a dealer in sporting goods, of No. 111 East One Hundred and Seventh street, was arrested today at Broadway and Chambers street by two of Capt. Thues's men in an old indictment.

He was indicted six years ago for the theft of two bicycles, but skipped his $100 bond. He is alleged to have been sent to the Maryland penitentiary for two years for theft of bicycles in Baltimore. When he came out he also received it is alleged the postoffice at Warren, Md., of $95 by raising money orders.

If he is not prosecuted on the charge of larceny of the wheels he will be turned over to the United States authorities.

ASA BIRD GARDINER REFEREE IN RAINES LAW HOTEL SUIT

Ex-District-Attorney Asa Bird Gardiner, acting as referee, heard testimony to-day on an application to the State Excise Commissioner to revoke the license of the "Bungalow," a saloon in "Little Neck Island," on Cathedral Heights. Witnesses testified that there were thirteen furnished rooms in the building and that the place was conducted as a Raines law hotel. Cross examination shook their testimony. If the "Bungalow" is closed action will be taken against resorts in One Hundred and Tenth street, near Broadway.

VIGILANTES IN ODELL CASE?

As a result of to-day's proclamation by Mayor Romaine, of Pompton Lakes, N. J., the citizens of that district will hold a mass meeting to-night or to-morrow to voice the general indignation over the failure to arrest the murderer of Marietta Odell. Additional interest was added to the quest for the murderer by the announcement of a $500 reward for his conviction. It was offered by J. G. Drew and E. R. Riker, of Wanaque.

1902 GROUNDS, NEW YORK, April 24.—The spring winds were whistling around the grand-stand in a Boctown snout when the New Yorks came out for practice at the Polo Grounds this afternoon.

It was decidedly cool. The feathered wickets had a crack in their backs and the crowd had apparently cracked. But out in the sunny lee of the western bluff the robins were roosting and the bees were bees-waxing and all nature, including the ball-players, were intent upon earning their salaries.

The New Yorks had beaten the bearded Bostonians twice. Could they do it again?

"Certainly," said Manager Fagot. "Nothing easier."

As he sat him down on the payers' bench and pulled his mustache with one hand and prepared to keep score with the other.

Fogel is a man of attitude, and this day he resolved to put Matty in the box.

Matty has all the tricks of a Hindu conjurer in his fingers and can throw his position like an acrobat. He never sits, steps a ball. He can turn around thirty-six times like Buffalo Bill's whirling dervish and catch a ball with his left hand.

The weather was not the best in the world for a pitcher's arm, but Matty does not care for a little thing like that. His own tabasco temperature makes up for any temperature in the weather.

And Brodie too, was on hand to help think along. He is not a bridge-

LEAGUE PARK, PHILADELPHIA, April 24.—It was Brooklyn for the fourth and last time this afternoon, and the Phillies went after the hapless Supercats with every armament of making it first straight. Such an outcome is possible considering the selfish article of ball Hamilton's dollars have played, but they were determined to take the only bats left them out of the Quaker collection.

The Shocker's rack has the best out with a grade over the round of three straight, big Willie Reiser says that over in Williamsburg's side goes before a fall into Newkirk's "hook," and the Phillies are about due to hit the to-be-gone.

His Master the Sun was as warm as ever this afternoon, but his rays were tempered by a cooling breeze. Notwithstanding this, the first outfielder stand and the fast ball passed by the Phillies, the crowd again turned out in disgust pointing numbers. Two thousand people look like a handful in the Council's long circle of seats, and from the sign of the Moore in the past. Abraham has turned out to be an old and his steady work and action behind the bat is a counterpart of McGuire in his pearly days.

Jack Higgins was given a chance to show his speed today, and if he was found to be right, the Superbas' first
